that affiant was never enrolled or attached to any special Company. Few days after his junction with the Texian patriots, affiant took an active part in the battle of Concepcion. The organization was not very regular, and the discipline not quite strict, every one who would fight, did it according to his wishes and impulsion, and affiant remembers well that, at said battle he was near by an American who was dangerously wounded, and was called, as far as affiant can make it out, Colonel Samlett, or, something approaching. that Colonel died afterwards from the results of his wound. - It was on the Court of affiant, that the men wounded at the battle of Concepcion were brought from Concepcion, to the North side of the City when the Camp was removed. - Affiant continued rendering the same Service of a general character, during all the siege of San Antonio; at the storming of the place he was at the Veramendi house, when the Column that had entered by Acequia str. and was engaged near the Gaza's house sent for reinforcement, at that moment the communication between the two divisions was very dangerous, although the distance that separated them was very short, so constant and so well was directed the enemy's fire, nevertheless affiant and some others decided to answer the call at all risks, they consequently started in a run from the Veramendi's house, but in crossing the Street, without any shelter, to protect them, Affiant received at the same instant two musket balls, the first one bruised his head, scratching the skin, without injuring the bones, - it was a slight wound; and a second ball struck his right foot, at the first articulation of the thumb without injuring seriously the bones,