paid by the Mexican Government were causing great destruction and damage to the Texian settlements, It was in one of said expeditions under the Command of Colonel Karnes, that being at the Llano Stacado, Affiant received two lance wounds, on his left arm, from which he has been suffering ever since, chiefly at every change of the weather. - At the organization of the Army, in November 1836, Affiant entered the Compy of Captain Salvador Flores, and continued in said service for several years, till after the retreat of Genl A. Wood. —

Affiant has never received any Donation, or Bounty warrant, for his military service, during and after the Siege of Bexar, as a volunteer, and when he has applied for them, he has invariably received for answer, to produce a regular discharge, when none was given, and also that his name did not appear in the muster roll of any Company. What was correct to the letter, since the special service of affiant was of such a ~~nature~~ general nature, that he was not enlisted in any particular Company. - And the former laws of the Republic and State of Texas did not enable the proper Authorities to grant any compensation to affiant; - The law enacted by the last Legislature on the 21st of April last, by the generality of its terms, seems to secure to him at last the right to apply for a pension ~~and~~ to which he considers himself justly and fully entitled to, if ~~any~~ pension is given for service rendered.
