that time I have heard Fonts frequently say that he was in the revolution that separated Texas from Mexico, that he joined the army in 1836, and I have heard him speak of incidents connected with that war. He has always been recognized as a Texan soldier, and from my long acquaintance with him extending over thirty-four (34) years, from my knowledge of his character from the statements he made in 1841, which were corroborated by Clark Briggs, I am satisfied that he is the identical person he represents himself to be, and a survivor of the revolution that separated Texas from Mexico.
