& after the Surrender of Gen Cos with his three thousand Mexicans, new Companies were formed & I joined Capt Glen Flynn's Company and went with a portion of our regiment to Labadie & remained in the service for five months at that place & left for home

This may explain why my name does not appear on the roll of Capt Breeze's Company the first one might have been destroyed and the last one preserved amongst the incidents that happened in the five days fight a mexican Centinel had been shot in both Knees by deaf Smith as the Columns reached town and who laid on a bed in a small stone room fronting the yard where allmost the whole army was collected for a while.

allso there was a Spanish officer who came up to the door. when it was opened by Crowbars and was about to be shot by the men when some of the officers saved his life.

allso the man in the Green Blanket who was shot through the head who laid on his back groaning in a room of the main house where there was silver plate, pianoforte and other costly furniture, and the little doctor who came out of a house with a ladies head dress on when the balls began flying about cutting all sort of funny Capers a Col. of the Command was shot through the temple upon reaching the front ranks &c.
